Babelfish Walking Tours:

DISTRICT WANDERINGS

Our pick-and-mix map for all strollers and urban explorers offers you the opportunity to experience Würzburg off the beaten tourist tracks. Here are some tips for you, but please feel free to just wander off into the blue and explore the city under your own steam.

1 Grombühl

The former working-class neighborhood is a rather sleepy district, but still worth a visit. The name refers to the historical name of the adjoining vineyards "Cranbühl", old word for the German "Krähenhügel" meaning "crow hill". The Würzburg University Hospital, one of the oldest university hospitals in Germany, is located in this area.

Tips: Check out the church 1a Pfarrkirche St. Josef to marvel at its comprehensive collection of local artists' traditional works of sacred art and go to the 1b Kunstforum to visit temporary exhibitions and art cafés. Würzburg's famous vineyard "Stein" with its hiking trail and 1c wine cultural heritage Stein-Main-Pfad directly adjoins the district. The trail also leads you to the tower 1d Bismarckturm in the natural landmark Bismarckwäldchen.

2 Pleich – Alter Hafen

The "Alter Hafen", the Old Harbor, in the district called "Äußere Pleich" used to be Würzburg's commercial port from 1875 up until the 1940s. As a result of the canalization of the river Main in the middle of the 20th century, a new harbor was set up outside the city, eventually rendering the old harbor redundant. In the 1950s, the harbor basin was reduced in size when the combined heat and power station was built. Nowadays, the area is mainly used for cultural activities.

Tips: Go visit the 2a Kulturspeicher and check out the museum Museum im Kulturspeicher and the art gallery BBK-Künstlergalerie. Different temporary exhibitions take place inside the old ship 2b Kunstschiff Arte Noha between March and November. In the daytime, the 2c MS- Zufriedenheit serves you coffee and wine specialties as well as innovative Franconian cuisine, at night it's a great place to party!

3 Zellerau

The Zellerau is Würzburg's fourth biggest district. While the name (a composition of the term "Aue vor Zell", meaning "meadow right before the village Zell") refers to the area's former rural structures, the current development rather reminds one of the district's history as a military quarter and working-class district. Since the US army's withdrawal in the beginning of the 1990s, the area has more and more become a young and creative neighborhood.
Tips: The beer garden and nightclub 3a Waldschänke Dornheim offers you a good deal of hipster atmosphere and the housing complex 3b Denckler-Block is the perfect place to explore Würzburg's alternative side. At the former site of the brewery 3c Bürgerbräu you can now find a creative cultural center with lots of artists' studios, restaurants and different events.

4 Frauenland

The Frauenland is Würzburg's second most populous district (after the Old Town) and is divided into the quarters Frauenland, Keesburg and Mönchberg. Until the secularization in the beginning of the 19th century, a large part of the district's area was owned by nunneries - hence its name ("Frauen" is the German word for "women").

Tips: On Zeppelinstraße, you can find Würzburg's 4a Graffiti Hall of Fame, and the 4b civic and cultural center Shalom Europa informs you about the history of the Lower Franconian and Würzburg's Jewish community. If you're a comic or fantasy fan, you should definitely visit the small book shop 4c Hermkes Romanboutique, and by strolling around the 4d Leighton-Areal you can explore the city's military history and at the same time get a glimpse of Würzburg's future.
